

I am a private pilot operating light aircraft. It is beyond belief that anybody familiar with aviation could possibly believe that general aviation aircraft pose a threat to national security. Therefore the permanent restrictions proposed by the FAA constitute an unwarranted and unnecessary intrusion upon my rights as a citizen to use the national airspace. The FAA cannot justify applying the proposed permanent restrictions to small general aviation aircraft, based on purely undocumented speculation that they pose a threat to national security. We need to have public hearings on this issue, before implementing any such permanent restrictions. Whose airspace is it anyway?
